Among the authenticated records of the renowned Captain Cook's voyage around the world, is found the statement, that while so-journing for a short time on the Branilian Coast of South America, he observed the natives using in the preparation of their food, a peculiar oil, which, upon examination, he cound to possess the appearance, taste and flavor of Butter; upon further inquiry, however, he ascertained that it was simply a substance that the ustives distilled in a crude and imperfect maniner from a rich and invariant plant that grew spontaneously and abondantly in that warm tropical country. A few years ago an eminent French chemist, while on a professional visit to the tropics, made numerical experiments with this remarkable production of nature, and succeeded in extracting a concentrated senence of the plant.
